The Cinderella gong is the latest fad. The Cinderella gong is the latest land. The early hour movement, which was tarted in Philadelphia by Mrs. C. C. Harison, Mrs. Frederick Mason and other minent society women, has been taken minent society women, may be the percepthere.

The West, with its usual vigor, has become quite enthusiastic over the idea. It is the matrons of the West who have established the ringing of the Cinderella acted-but one doesn't want to be rude, you know.

Many a maiden has put a very pretty gong at the side of her fireplace in drawing room or sitting room, and when the clock points to 10:30 p. m. she playfully steps there and rings it.

Time may come when her caller, or callers, will put aside the hint and remain on but to day the maiden thinks she is very much in earnest and refuses to be coerced into sitting, up later than 10:30, at a quiet "it bome."

The Cinderella gong is very new, but it had its counterpart several years ago. The charming mother of a popular young woman arranged a little clock in a wide velvet stand.

They will make their home in Tampico, where Mr. Gareza is row employed in the postal service of Mexico.

Mrs. J. B. Spellman, of Washington

To George Elstnore Jones is due the introduction in this city of the laundryman's worst enemy, the "zebra" collar. His nightmares in red and white, yellow and white and blue and white set the pace. An enterprising shirtmaker took up the idea and flooded the towa with them. Like its brother in sin, the "owl" tie it is not worn by good dressers. Imitation dudes, however, affect it, and it is also becoming popular on North McGee street, and in the North end.

J. Waldere Kirk is again using Coates House stationery. This time he dropped into town quietly from Sloux City, where he has been in retirement since he was shorn of his laurels by "the Made in Kansas City" dresser, J. John Roddy, Kirk looks well, has a happy, contented smile with him all the time and a pleasant word for everybody. But he is presuming on the good-nature of the people; he is getting careless; he is out of date, and the impression is growing that he looks upon Kansas City as a jay town. Because of this belief his popularity is wanning. He's get to do better. He's got to discard his Li flung Chang overcoat. It may do for St. Joseph, but it has been seen too often in Kansas City.

The latest English overcoat will soon be seen in town. It will have the new Raglan sleeve effect—the sleeve seams being gracefully rounded from the shoulder, both front and back, producing a very pretty effect. Only men with well rounded shoulders and with plenty of flesh can wear it with the assurtance of looking well. The sample that will shortly be exhibited on the Lane is made of heavy brown cloth, with velvet collar but without the velvet cuffs. It will be creased in the back, which will cause it to always hang gracefully.

J. John Roddy is responsible for the creased overcoat. He read somewhere that the Duc de Castellane, Anna Gould's husband, and who is the best dresser in Europe, had introduced the crease on the boulevards of Parls, and he immediately had his coat operated upon. The effect was so swell that a dozen of his admirers followed his example the same day, and now the Lane is never free from the crease.

Roddy's fame as a dresser will not die out as long as the present crop of newsboys holds out. Whenever he appears on the streets his ears are saluted with: "All about the man who drove Jones out of town." Speaking of Roddy is a reminder that he has a-father who is in the dressing ring himself. He has had a new overcoat built that makes Roddy's famous coat look faded and de trop. Roddy is now getting a bell-skirted Prince Albert suit made in an effort to retain his prestige in his family.

The side crease will not, in my opinion, ever become popular. It destroys the fit and fabric and is evidently the idea of some man who wants to pose as an eccentric. Kansas City dressers will never adopt it."

News comes from New York that Henry News comes from New York that Henry Loose is cutting a wide swath there as a swell. He has handsome bachelor apartments at the Waldorf, drives blooded horses, and is one of the best dressers of the metropolis. He is said to the the hottest thing on Broadway during the prometade hour. But Henry can afford it. His father is rich, and makes money faster than Henry can spend it.

String ties are worn now very short, and string ties are work how very short, and most men find it an exceedingly difficult task to tie them properly. For that reason the ready-made tie is becoming popular, and haberdashers are doing a good business in them. The spring neckwear will be dreams of beauty. The patterns will run to plaids, but of subdued colors, and purple effects. The latter will be will run to plaids, but of subdued colors, and purple effects. The latter will be known as the Cyrano, and will be in Paristan blue, violet, lavender and combinations which will eclipse in every detail any fad that has preceded it. They will soon be in the market, and, if not adopted by the "zebra" collar and owl tie devotees, will become the runs. ome the rage.

Ernest Cronin is again on deck in Kansas City, and, as usual, dresses with taste and care. He has been in Philadelphia and New York, and was satlated with the pleasures to be found there. He will attend the Bohemian Club this evening, and ex-pects a warm welcome from the buds. poets a warm welcome from the buds. George Stone, of Sedalia, will also be there. George likes the society of the buds. He had such a good time with them last Sunday night, that he couldn't resist the cordial invitation to return.

Loud hosiery will be out of date this spring. Instead of the brilliant plaids now in vogue, the colors will be plain and subdued. The styles in shirts will also undergo changes. The stripes and bars will give way to polka dots and neat figures, and the bosoms will be stiff. Harry Wolff is the authority for the statement, and he ought to know. It is his business to know.

Willie Roberts and Vincie Dole are seen on the Lane quite frequently, of late, and generally stop at Bullene's corner for a rest. Their presence at the trysting place has occasioned comment, and several buds are wondering what they mean.

The Euterpe Club concert on Thursday afternoon brought out a large andlence of music lovers. Lyceum hall was filled to its utmost capacity. Each number was enthusiastically applauded and a few of the numbers were followed by encores. Mrs. W. D. Steele, of Sedalla, who was to have sung, was unable to be present. Mrs. Mary Burnett took her place most acceptably. She sang "Midsummer Dream," by d'Hardelot. Mrs. Burnett's sympathetic voice brought out all the melody in the song and pleased her hearers greatly. Mr. Louis Appy gave two 'cello numbers, both exceptionally fine. Miss Harriet Turner's sweet soprano was admirably adapted to "When Cella Sings." The violin solo of Miss Caroline Leidigh was a difficult number and was very well rendered. Miss Edith Chapman, Miss Mamie Egelston, Mrs. W. W. Graham and Miss Elizabeth Wilson played the opening number, a plano quartette, Marche Hongroise, from the "Dammation of Faust." Mrs. Lee Riley's piano solo, "Cachouche Brilliante," by Raff, was an excellent number.

Mr. Jesse Crump is a bass singer of much talent and his solo. "By the Waters of Babylon," was one of the especially good features of the afternoon. The Euterpe Club can claim a great many talented members.
